First records of winegrowing and winemaking date back to Celtic times, who were the first ones to cultivate grapes in this area. The Celtic peoples were followed by Roman Legions, who perfected the wine-making process.

Today the conditions favour more the white than the red wine varieties.

The main varieties, having the highest acreage, are the Grüner Veltliner and Welschriesling, producing pleasant fruity wines with mild spicy palate.

However the red wine varieties, such as Blaufränkisch and St. Laurent, also hold their ground, but the speciality are mainly the newly cultivated varieties of the Dunaj (Danube) (the Danube) and Alibernet type, making significant inroads in the recent past.

Slovakia comprises six winegrowing regions, with each having distinct terroir characteristics, with a total of approximately 12,000 ha of vineyards.
